REFLECTION

Today's gospel follows immediately upon last week's, when Peter was constituted foundation stone of the Church. But now Jesus begins to speak of his freely accepted destiny to suffer and die. Peter is scandalized, and tries to dissuade his master. He would have Jesus be a glorious Messiah, not a suffering servant. Before, Jesus had called Peter his rock; now he severely terms him Satan. Not only must Jesus suffer; his disciples must do likewise, sharing the Lord's destiny. This is a hard saying; when Jesus finally reaches Jerusalem, he will walk alone to the cross. The loneliness of the person called by God is demonstrated by the vehemence with which Jeremiah struggles against his prophetic calling. But the fire of the Spirit is irresistible; the prophet cannot keep silence. He must do God's work and speak God's word. In our day we can offer our lives freely to God, not counting the cost. Then the Spirit will fashion us according to God's will, making us perfect disciples of the Lord Jesus.
